Work on Sh516m free children hospital starts

Construction of sub-Saharan Africa's second children's public health facility after South Africa started at the Moi Teaching and Referral Hospital in Eldoret yesterday. The hospital, funded by Shoe4Africa chief executive Toby Tanser at a cost Sh516 million, will treat children in East Africa for free. Mr Tanser said the idea was born after the 2007 post-poll chaos when he learnt that a child died for lack of medical attention.
